BLACK AND RED TERRORISTS ON MARCH

Nationalist comment WHAT WE THINK on the month's news

Progress of race suicide

There is no greater falsehood presently being peddled by the frightened men of the established parties than the claim that the immigrant queue will eventually dry up. The truth is that it is endless. Leaving aside the remaining 42,000 East African Asians who are 'entitled' to come to Britain, the figures given for dependants from India, Pakistan and Bangladesh who still have entry rights are not to be believed. The Government has estimated the total number at 100,000, but British embassy officials believe that there may be 100,000 from Pakistan alone.

What makes the queue literally endless, however, is the continual entry of parents and relatives of these dependants, in addition to the 'right' of those born here to bring over 'fiances', a process which is self-perpetuating. The numbers arising from the immigrant smuggling racket are likewise incalculable.

As the coloured population of Britain increases by almost a quarter of a million every three years, the white population is decreasing by a corresponding amount. The net loss of white Britons through emigration in 1975 alone was 74,200.

Britain is simply committing genetic suicide. As we continually bale out a bottomless sea of inferior genes from the Third World and import them into our own land, we are simultaneously spilling out a constant flow of our own white British racial stock that will increase as the situation worsens. That may balance the books for the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, but in reality it means a rapid slide towards racial extinction for the indigenous people of this country.

Who's whose patron?

Sir Bernard Delfont, boss of the giant EMI corporation; Sir Lew Grade, head of ATV; Sir Joseph Kagan, raincoat merchant;

Sir Max Rayne, chairman of London Merchant Securities; Jimmy Goldsmith, financier and rescuer of Slater Walker; Sigmund Sternberg, chairman of the Commodities Research Unit; Sir George Weidenfeld, publisher; and Eric Miller, property developer and chairman of Socialist International. These people have three things in common — of which one is the fact that Sir Harold Wilson deemed them worthy of the highest national dignities in his resignation honours list.

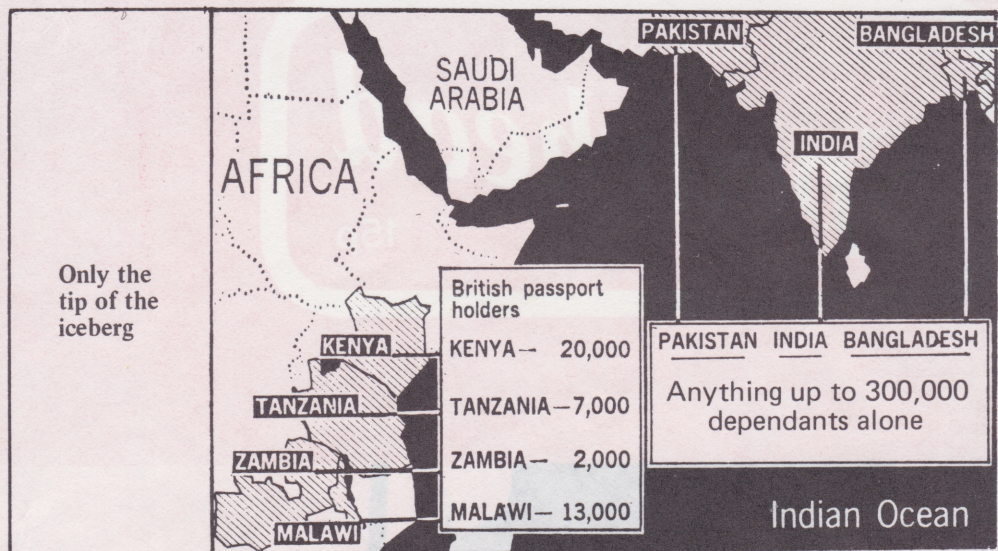

Newspapers dwelt with surprise, indeed with amazement, on the striking contrast between the type of grasping capitalist whom Sir Harold saw fit to honour and among whom he counts his personal friends, and the socialist ideals for which the Labour party reputedly stands.

Readers of Spearhead, however, will be familiar with this age-old and apparent contradiction. What is called "socialism" has been the child and beneficiary of rich, cosmopolitan capitalists ever since millionaire Israel Helphand financed the Bolshevik party and the Schiffs, the Kahns and the Warburgs generously supplied the funds for Lenin's revolution. Since then "socialism" throughout the world has been sustained by the wealthiest of capitalists, not least in Britain, where the coffers of the Labour party have regularly been replenished by some of Sir Harold's recently ennobled friends as well as by previously honoured financiers and chain store merchants.

The media was right, of course, to observe the contradiction, albeit somewhat belatedly. Where they were wrong was in describing Wilson as the patron of his capitalist friends. It is far more likely to be the other way round.

EEC rules the waves

We are told, in these progressive times, that the day of the small nation state is over. Effective world power lies only through membership of multi-national conglomerates such as the Common Market, so the story goes. If ever the lie was given to this theory, it was on the occasion of Britain's defeat by Iceland in the so-called cod war.

Iceland, a small but robust nation not entangled in membership of the EEC, fought against Britain, against international law and against a large section of "world opinion" — and won. Whatever the two sides of the issue might have been, Iceland nevertheless fought for what she believed to be her national rights and succeeded. Britain fought and lost, despite having that "voice in a wider community" which was supposed to confer on us the blessings of international power and authority.

It was precisely because of her EEC involvement that Britain suffered such a humiliating defeat in the battle for fishing rights. It was one of the more glaring examples of what nationalists always said would happen as a result of Common Market membership: the loss of national sovereignty. Britain now has no rights over her own waters except those granted to her by the Market bureaucrats. Consequently we were unable to exert that authority as a sea-faring nation which undisputed command over 200 miles of ocean would have given us.

Iceland won because she remains a sovereign state; Britain lost because she is no longer a self-governing nation but a petty vassal state which pays feudal homage to the princes of Brussels.

Crime and equality

Deputy Assistant Commissioner David Powis of Scotland Yard must surely have made one of the stupidest statements ever uttered by a policeman, who ought to know better, during a recent lecture tour of America.

In an interview with The New Yorker, Mr. Powis claimed that unless steps are taken immediately to deal with it, "racial inequality" would ultimately "destroy Western civilisation". He further alleged, sounding more like a spokesman for the National Council for Civil Liberties than Scotland Yard, that "the basic problem that creates crime" was, yes, "inequality".

If anything is going to destroy Western civilisation, Mr. Powis ought to be aware, it is not racial inequality but racial equality. The concept of equalising the races when they are manifestly and provably unequal, and of integrating the peoples of the West with the primitive races of Africa and Asia, are thoroughly alien schemes that can only subvert and destroy Western culture, which until now has managed to survive by recognising inequality and practising racial separatism.

As for the idea that inequality creates crime, all the evidence, as Mr. Powis should know better than anybody, points to the contrary. The more 'equality' there is, the greater the crime rate. Over the last 20 years there has been enormous progress (if that is the right word) in equalising the status of the coloured races, yet coloured crime figures have shot through the roof in both Britain and the United States.

Giving sops of 'equality' to the Negro in the hope of averting crime and insurrection is monumentally stupid. Just like children, the more they are given, the more they want and the more they will take, by violence if necessary.

Confidence trick

Sincere nationalists cannot have failed to mark the difference, in their respective stands against the Race Relations Board, between the courageous Robert Relf and "National Party" splinter group leader Kingsley Read.

Rather than obey an injunction brought by the Race Relations Board to remove his "For Sale to an English Family Only" sign, Robert Relf was prepared to go to prison indefinitely. He compounded this courage, and the admiration felt for him by all patriotic Englishmen, by going on hunger strike in protest against what he called "this evil government".

Relf thus did what Mr. Read always promised he would do . . . but didn't. Throughout his period with the National Front, Read firmly avowed that he would rather go to prison than apologise to the Race Board for his discrimination advice to local electors, and for that reason he won the confidence and the financial support of NF members. But when it came to the crunch, Read squirmed out by giving a miserable apology to the Board and a promise not to repeat his action in future.

National Front poll success brings Jewish warning

By a Staff Reporter

National Front candidates received more than 50,000 votes in the recent local elections, according to an analysis by the Board of Deputies of British Jews.

They fielded far more candidates than in the May, 1975, elections, when they received a total of 13,524 votes, just over a quarter of this year's total. Their proportion of the vote in wards they contested in both years greatly increased in many cases.

Dr Jacob Gewirtz, executive director of the board's defence committee, said in an official statement that the party's strong showing "should serve as a warning to those who still believe that fascism cannot gain widespread support here". He noted that in Leicester, where 48 National Front candidates contested all the seats in the city's 16 wards, the party obtained 18 per cent of the vote

Whether this was cowardice or sheer opportunism in wishing to retain his Council seat, or both, is of little consequence. It is sickening.

It appears that the significance of Mr. Read's action is not understood by his local public; but what remains of his supporters cannot have failed to appreciate it.

Millions in bath vomit horror

Fresh atrocity charges have been made against the post-Franco Spanish regime.

Comment is made elsewhere in this issue on the subject of atrocity allegations. What is noticeable about such charges is that, when they concern "fascist" or right-wing regimes, they are often of such an utterly fantastic and bizarre nature that even the most gullible of people ought to think twice before giving them credence. Murdering millions of people by electrocution in baths, for example, must strike the average person as somewhat impractical, to say the least.

According to the Guardian (who else?), a Basque separatist under interrogation by the Spanish secret police was repeatedly submerged in a bath filled with excrement and vomit until he almost drowned.

We invite the reader to contemplate for one moment the practicalities involved here. Are we to imagine the Spanish police diligently filling this bath over a prolonged period, or perhaps rows of Basque separatists forcibly given emetics and senna-pods for the occasion?

What utter nonsense!

and in one ward came within 60 votes of winning a seat.

In Blackburn, the National Party, which broke away from the National Front at the beginning of the year, obtained 4,777 votes and won two seats. The two National Front candidates in Blackburn also did well, in one ward coming second to Labour, pushing the Conservative and Liberal candidates into third and fourth place respectively.

Dr Gewirtz said there were indications that much of the National Front's support, especially in the Midlands, was coming from working-class voters. In the strongly Labour West Bromwich area its candidates obtained 17 per cent of the vote.

"Undoubtedly immigration is a key issue, and the National Front made the most of the spate of publicity given to the Asian family which had been put up in a luxury hotel", he added.

BRITAIN SINKS TO NEW DEPTHS

Robert Relf jailed...

Jailed: Robert Relf

ONE might have thought that British governments had brought this country to its lowest depths when they permitted and did nothing to halt the coloured invasion of Britain, or when they foisted on the British people the Race Relations Act. And then came Rhodesia. It seemed just impossible for any British government to sink any lower than the appalling betrayal of our kin in Rhodesia, and the granting of millions of pounds worth of aid to its Marxist enemies. Surely that was the limit of national degradation.

But no. Robert Relf was sent to prison — a British patriot whose sole 'crime' was to advertise his home for sale to an English family only. It is scarcely believable that Britain has sunk to such a state, or rather to such a police state, in which the Race Relations bullies can jail a Briton for nothing more than exercising his freedom of choice in refusing to sell his house to a coloured immigrant.

That Robert Relf was jailed is not only proof of his great courage in the fight against multi-racial tyranny, but a symbol of the utter sickness and prostration of modern Britain.

Asians in £600 per week luxury

Ashaf Suleman and

Sussex hotel.

BRITAIN'S sickness was highlighted all the more, and the jailing of Relf made even more shameful, by news of further droves of East African Asians pouring into Britain and being given four star luxury hotel accommodation at a cost of £600 per week. While Relf sat in his cell at Winson Green prison, two newly arrived Asian families at a Sussex hotel were occupying double-bedroom suites with bath and TV, and drawing £46 per week in social security benefits. "Many families are going to come", said one immigrant, "because they know they will get assistance to settle from the social security".

This is the "social justice" we hear so much about. And it's legal. Meanwhile, Robert Relf was being treated by a Nigerian doctor as a suitable Soviet-style mind punishment for displaying his 'illegal' sale notice in his front garden!

Hundreds of Asians pouring into Gatwick and Heathrow airports have already gone straight onto social security and into hotels that could have been used for homeless British families. The London Borough of Hillingdon, incorporating Heathrow Airport, is housing Asian immigrants in hotels at a cost of £4 every night, from where they have gone straight to the top of Hillingdon Council's housing waiting list ahead of 18,000 British families.

The claim that this preferential treatment is "temporary" is completely false. Those immigrants housed in the luxury Sussex hotel at a cost of £600 per week are destined for housing at Budgenor Lodge in rural Midhurst, a building now converted into 16 flats for homeless families — Asian ones, of course. Cost to the taxpayer: £25 per week per family, not including social security benefits.

And there are more coming. About 55,000 more East African Asians from Africa itself, and a further 25,000 who are using India as a staging post. They will get free accommodation too; and if they can afford to buy your house there will be no problem there, because in Britain today you get jailed if you refuse to sell it to them.

The collapse of the Multi-Racial society

LAST MONTH, an immigrant leader added a new twist to the storm over Mr. Enoch Powell's disclosure of a 'confidential' Foreign Office report exposing immigration rackets in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh. Dr. Dhani Prem, director of the Indian Advisory Council for the U.K., said racial trouble was likely to develop in Britain if the 60,000 dependents of Asians already here were refused entry. To refuse entry to these aliens would, he considered, be a retrograde step and the Asian community in Britain would "not accept it lying down".

While delivering this 'ultimatum' to the British Government, Dr. Prem failed to reveal how long he himself has been in Britain, and where exactly he resides here. For if he were white and unlucky enough to be living near or inside one of Britain's many coloured ghettos, he could be forgiven for assuming that blacks in Britain had already declared war against their white counterparts.

Coloured violence in the streets of many of Britain's towns and cities is increasing at such a rapid rate that it threatens to approach the level of New York before long. In many parts of the West Midlands, the North of England and the Greater London Area in particular, racial disturbance is escalating so alarmingly that local police forces are at their wits end to know how best to combat this new social plague spreading throughout Britain. Figures were released recently by the Metropolitan Police which revealed that in South London, where mugging is so rampant it keeps people indoors at night, 80% of the muggers were black and 85% of their victims were white. While incidents of mugging in other parts of Britain may not at present be quite so endemic as in London, definite signs are beginning to emerge elsewhere which indicate the same alarming pattern of coloured viciousness spreading to all parts of Britain within the next decade. Racial disturbances between white and coloured youths have already been highlighted by the media in parts of Greater London, Liverpool, and other major cities. However, less publicised race riots are also becoming a frequent problem in other parts of Britain with a lower coloured/white population ratio as well! One such riot which was 'censored' by the media outside the West Country was mentioned in January's Spearhead and took place in the 'quiet' West Country town of Trowbridge, Wiltshire, last year. And in Bristol, residents living in multi-storey flats near the immigrant dominated St. Pauls area are advised by local councillors not to use the pedestrian subways at night because muggings have become such an insidious feature of these walk-ways.

YOUNG POLICEMAN STABBED

Black muggings are, of course, only one aspect of the worsening racial situation developing throughout Britain today. Birmingham has already witnessed its first young policeman stabbed to death by a black, and coloureds are being convicted daily in most of our major cities for vicious attacks on the police and innocent members of the public. The incidence of white girls being raped by blacks is also on the increase, and racial tension in many of Britain's large Comprehensive schools is becoming a constant worry for local Education Authorities. Blacks are also heavily involved in all kinds of illicit rackets ranging from prostitution, immigrant smuggling, narcotic distribution, pornography rings and protection rackets to illegal gaming and drinking clubs, Rachman-style property lettings, and unregistered Taxi and car-hire 'businesses'. In most of Britain's coloured ghettos, blacks have long disregarded local planning regulations, with many Local Authorities turning a 'blind eye' to building construction alterations and additions which whites in other parts of the same town would quickly be hauled before the courts for breaching.

Of course, many reasons are given by Britain's little army of racial do-gooders in defence of the blacks' steady involvement in crime, such as failure to integrate in the wider community, environmental inequity, bad housing, overcrowded schools, unemployment, and of course the old stand-by which guarantees most coloureds a permanent place in Britain's loafers' paradise — "racial discrimination". However, when crowing their half-baked theories in defence of black lawlessness, Britain's race-mixing pragmatists always overlook the fact that many of the 'problems' facing coloureds were also faced by Britons during the Depression of the 'thirties. However, even the pernicious Means Test failed to transform Britain's unemployed hungry masses into marauding thugs! How much longer these simpering, race-mixing blockheads will be allowed to prevaricate, while innocent white victims of black gangsterism remain on the sidelines watching the hapless plight of the police attempting to combat black lawlessness with one hand tied behind their backs, and while Home Office Quislings work out 'tolerant' solutions, remains to be seen.

PERVERTED IDEALISM

Sooner or later, however, their perverted idealism will be forced, through events beyond their control, to give way to more invincible facts of life as the violence increases. Like it or not, Britain's "anything for a quiet life brigade" will eventually have to remove their soft heads from the clouds and concede facts which history has proved time and again throughout the ages: that there are innate characteristics dividing blacks and whites which are far more significant than social or economic deprivation. In fact, as racial violence and lawlessness spreads to all corners of Britain, events are even now beginning to overtake the race-mixing dreamers' concept of a Britain where whites and blacks live in perpetual harmony — with no doubt the sun shining every day as well! Why is it that these people remain so conceited that they never learn the lessons of history? History can signal its changes to wise men without violence, but for those who prefer to ignore its warnings, it then lets all hell loose to call attention. The racial uneasiness manifesting itself throughout Britain is in fact an urgent call upon British politicians to pay attention, before it is too late, to a condition which unless checked soon will transform Britain into a bloody battlefield within the next few years.

The dramatic increase in support for the National Front demonstrated during recent local government elections is a clear indication that the British people are at last beginning to stir from their long slumber. And as they continue to wake up and become more conscious of how their birthright has been stolen from them and their heritage betrayed through mass coloured immigration, the British people will demand wholesale retribution for the disgraceful contempt which has been heaped on them by their political overlords for the past 30 years.

Meanwhile, even now, with the warning bells ringing loud and clear, it would be abject folly for anyone familiar with our contemporary politicians' approach to any emergency to expect that they will heed these warnings. British people, sagacious enough to know how the system works at the top, are not fooled by recent utterances by the Government's Chief Whip, Bob Mellish, calling for a halt to further immigration, for they know only too well that pleas from his sort are meaningless verbiage designed to placate Labour's worried supporters. Where has Mellish been cringing for the past 30 years? Why has he not expressed his so-called concern before now? The fact is that whatever vestige of credibility Tory, Labour and Liberal politicians may still have with the British electorate is fast running out — and they know it only too well!

THOUSANDS MORE IMMIGRANTS

Sadly, however, the process of degeneration in Britain is likely to continue for a few more years yet. We will continue to suffer the torment of watching thousands more immigrants and their dependents pour into Britain each year. And Britain's black ghettos will continue to serve as fertile breeding grounds for all kinds of vicious thugs and left-wing revolutionaries. And as the situation worsens, it may well be necessary, in order to prevent black violence and left-wing nihilism from getting too far out of hand, for groups of white vigilantes to patrol immigrant-infested parts of Britain in order to protect white residents from vicious attacks by black thugs, in much the same way as the Ulster Service Corps have formed auxiliary groups to help enforce the law in Northern Ireland.

Of one thing we can be certain. That as violence increases in Britain, the 'progressive' thinkers running the country at present are going to find it increasingly difficult to contain the public's mounting anger over their inability to check the chaos.

British Nationalists have for long been warning of the kind of future in store for Britain as a result of the folly of allowing unbridled coloured immigration. Many Britons, unfortunate enough to live in immigrant areas, are already receiving object lessons in Westminster treason as they fall victims to black muggers, rapists, thugs and intimidators.

Decent people everywhere now realise that in allowing immigrants here, Parliament made a disastrous mistake. This mistake can only be rectified through the implementation of National Front policies. Let's hope that our Britain is not dragged too far into the abyss before the National Front takes over the reins in the struggle ahead to save our nation.

SPECIAL 'TROUBLESHOOTING' INVESTIGATION

SPECIAL BRANCH KNOWS IT... TOP JOURNALISTS KNOW IT

Zionists run biggest 'dirty operation in Britain

"CONSPIRACY" is a word which seems to have entered the vocabulary of those involved in the mainstream of British politics today. Until recently the word was almost exclusively to be seen in publications such as Spearhead and the late A. K. Chesterton's brilliant Candour.

Probably this development has come about as a result of the findings of the Watergate investigations. As a result of those findings an awful lot of people who had previously scoffed at "conspiracy theories" as being the product of "paranoia" are now awake to the possibility that some events take place not as a result of "coincidence" but because they were the product of, yes, CONSPIRACIES involving Top People and aided by unlimited amounts of cash.

There are, of course, numerous political conspiracies at large in the world. We of Spearhead hold that the two biggest conspiracies are those of International Communism and International Zionism. The conspiracy promoted by International Communism is relatively well known, and will not be made the theme of this article. I propose to deal with certain localised aspects of the Zionist conspiracy.

Given that more and more ordinary students of the political scene have been enabled to surmount the conspiracy-theory credibility hurdle, the leaders of the Zionist conspiracy must be worried that too many people will start to look around the world with wide open eyes and will start to arrive at some inevitable conclusions. This being so, if I were a Zionist conspirator I would turn to my cohorts and say:

"If the public have tumbled on conspiracy as a fact of life, and have had their appetites whetted for details of conspiracy, then we must provide them with matter which will occupy their stupid minds and distract attention from us to our enemies!"

SOUTH AFRICA A TARGET

This kind of thinking, I believe, is what lies behind all the hullabaloo over the alleged conspiracy by South Africa's Bureau of State Security (BOSS) to smear the leadership of the Liberal Party. As I write this article (19th May) no details of this alleged conspiracy have been published anywhere — only details of unsubstantiated and often ludicrous allegations.

What was noteworthy about the accusations against the South African Embassy staff in London, however, was that in Parliament at any rate they seem to have been levelled by an old friend of Spearhead readers, the Zionist Labour M.P. Paul Rose. It is because of Rose's involvement in the allegation campaign that I believe the allegations are without any great substance.

Long observation of the charming Mr. Rose and those with whom he associates persuades me that he is a member of a Zionist intelligence and propaganda network which is organised jointly by the Defence Committee of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, the Association of Jewish Ex-Servicemen and Israeli Secret Service agents operating under the cover of a variety of Israeli organisations, including the Herut Party. The network does not have a name, and indeed it seems to operate in a number of seemingly separate and watertight compartments... some compartments engaging in thoroughly lawful, if intellectually dishonest public relations and propaganda operations (this is Mr. Rose's side of things); while other compartments engage in shadowy, dishonest and downright criminal activities.

Spokesmen for the above named constituent groups of the network have repeatedly made it clear in the Jewish Chronicle that they regard themselves as being "at war" with all Right Wing and "Racist" forces in Britain, and that they are devoted to disrupting and destroying any attempts to promote (at any rate among the Gentile population) ethnic pride as opposed to multi-racialism; and patriotism and nationalism as opposed to cosmopolitanism and internationalism. Such spokesmen have continually proclaimed: "Our main target is the National Front" (this, mark you, from "defence" organisations!).

Naturally the ideological/racial motivations which compel the Zionist intelligence network to "make war" on the National Front must in all logic make its members hostile to any and all of other white racialistic and/or militantly nationalistic influences existing in or potentially influencing British society. Thus the South African Embassy would come into their natural line of fire... and so would the Chilean Embassy.

Certainly it can be proved that South Africa has a secret service (BOSS) and that its agents operate posing as embassy staff. The secret services of Britain, America, Russia, Israel and every other power operate in just the same way. Certainly BOSS maintains files on leading Liberals... and also leading Conservatives, Labourites, Communists, businessmen, Trotskyites and National Fronters. Similar files are maintained by the intelligence services of all the other foreign powers, as well as national newspapers and press agencies. So what?

BIG LIE TECHNIQUE

But of course Rose is well enough practised in the Big Lie technique (being both a politician and a barrister) to know that if one fires off enough cleverly-worded accusations from the privileged protection of the House of Commons, and if all one's accusations, no matter how wild and woolly, are given maximum publicity by pre-briefed Zionist or pro-Zionist journalists, then in the public mind the difference between unsubstantiated accusation and established fact will blur.

Paul Rose it was who, directly or indirectly, advised the National Executive of the Labour Party, via a report prepared by the party's National Agent in 1974, that National Front posters bearing pro Hitler slogans had been posted in his constituency (Blakeley, Manchester) during the February, 1974, General Election. I wrote to Transport House and to Rose requesting a photo-copy of the alleged poster. Naturally, as no such poster had ever existed, neither the Labour Party nor Mr. Rose was able to oblige me.

Then there was the massive publicity given by the media in April, 1975, to Rose's baited-breath expose of the Hitler birthday party farce. Even though these 'celebrations' were in no way organised by the NF, and in no way reflected NF policy, Rose (in BBC World This Weekend and ATV Today interviews) made allegations against the National Front.

Rose was associated with the promotion, this April, of the attempt to smear the NF by association with the tiny Column 88 'Nazi' organisation, which allegedly engaged in night battle exercises with units of the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserve.

This smear was set up by a "research journalist" with a sinister background called Gerry Gable. More of Gable in due course — but it was he who recruited a member of the Communist Party called Roberts to infiltrate the Birmingham Branch of the National Front. Roberts found nothing untoward to report on and he drifted off with a couple of NF rejects into the cranky circles of Column 88.

Information on Column 88 was fed back through Gable to Maurice Ludmer, the Editor of a Birmingham based Zionist "anti-Fascist" magazine called Searchlight. Ludmer and Gable (both members of the Zionist intelligence network) hoped that Roberts would get right to the heart of Column 88 — but his cover was 'blown' after being arrested and convicted for being a party to a plan to beat up an Indian waiter!

Much was made of the "battle exercises" allegations, and of the fact that all sorts of tape recordings and documents had been handed over to the Midlands Special Branch and the Home Office, and that those departments as well as the Ministry of Defence was investigating the whole affair. This time Gable, not Rose, was interviewed by the BBC World This Weekend programme — though Gable remained anonymous — but not for "obvious reasons".

At the end of all the publicity, at the end of all the Questions in the House posed by Rose and other Labour Zionists, a spokesman for the Minister of Defence told the House of Commons that the whole story was a lot of rubbish with no substantial basis in truth. The allegations, he said, had done a lot of unnecessary harm to the T.A.V.R. Column 88 had not trained with the T.A.V.R. — but might have engaged in an exercise with a unit of the schoolboy Army Cadet Corps!

Still, what did Rose and his friends care? They had got into the papers again carrying out their essential functions of keeping the rank and file of the Jewish Community in a state of Zionist-directed stampede; of keeping the name of the National Front smeared by association with 'Nazi' cranks; and of keeping public attention directed away from the conspiratorial nature of the Zionist Movement. Anyway, by the time that the puff had gone out of the Column 88 smear accusations, Rose had got a good head of steam up making equally wild allegations about a BOSS 'dirty tricks' department operating from the South African Embassy.

CHILEAN EMBASSY SMEAR

Concurrent with the smear campaign against the South African Embassy was a smear campaign directed against the Chilean Embassy. This smear campaign was also concocted and organised by the Zionist intelligence network, but promoted with the help of the Leftists who run London Weekend Television's The London Programme. The story was used on Sunday 16th May.

According to The London Programme a person (who on the programme used the pseudonym "John Cooper") attended a meeting of the Monday Club in 1973 and met an official of the Chilean Embassy. Shortly after this meeting, "Cooper" went to the embassy to ask an official to "buy space in a magazine". The magazine was not named. "Cooper" stated that as a result of this visit he was recruited by the official into a 'dirty tricks' squad.

"Cooper" claimed to have been employed to photograph Chilean exiles opposed to the Right Wing regime of General Pinochet at rallies and at emigre organisations' offices; to infiltrate emigre organisations and steal documents from them; to make nuisance late-night telephone calls to the pro-Red M.P. Mrs. Judith Hart; to build up dossiers on British opponents of the Chile regime; and to engage in all manner of other subversive acts.

"Cooper" claims he backed out of the whole set-up after two years when he was allegedly offered a firearm and asked to join the Chilean secret police which allegedly organised the murder of prominent Chilean emigres in Europe who opposed the Pinochet junta. "Cooper" clearly exaggerated the tasks he was asked to perform, for he was allegedly employed for a period of two years, yet over the whole of that period he was only paid £530! Even fifth-rate James Bonds get paid more than £265 per annum!

Confirmation that the whole set of allegations were utter rubbish was given when the programme's interviewer let slip the fact that the "research journalist" responsible for producing the story was our old chum Gerry Gable. How interesting that Gable should produce a horror story involving 'dirty tricks', thefts of documents, intimidation, smear dossiers and the like! He is well qualified to know all about that kind of thing.

In the early 1960's Gable was one of the most vicious and fanatical members of the Zionist thug organisation known as the 62 Group. In 1962 a group of the most extreme 62 Group members raided the Head Office of Sir Oswald Mosley's Union Movement on a document-stealing foray. During the raid U.M. staff were beaten up and tortured, and equipment was wrecked. Several Zionist thugs were apprehended and sustained criminal convictions as a result of the affair. The new "Seven Year Rule" law prevents me from mentioning names.

Later, one particular 62 Group adherent, dressed up as a Gas Board mechanic, entered the flat of the historical author David Irving (author of The Destruction of Dresden) and was apprehended rifling the flat for documents to steal. He sustained a further conviction.

"RESEARCH JOURNALISM"

As Colin Jordan's National Socialist Movement faded out during the later part of the 1960's, and as the National Front had only just been born, the steam seemed to go out of the 62 Group — but Gable intensified his efforts to build himself a career in "research journalism". No longer were Right Wingers subjected to sudden vicious attacks by 62 Group razor boys. Instead they — especially the NF — had to contend with vile anonymous 'smear' leaflets, with forged organisational bulletins, with defamatory and muck-raking smear articles in magazines such as Private Eye and Trotskyite rags such as the now defunct 7 Days.

Above all, Right Wing organisations and individuals had to contend with a continual series of break-ins, raids and thefts.

In 1970 the NF Head Office was stormed by two or three thugs who beat up the Office Manager and stole a number of membership file cards. The private home of the author of books on racial subjects, H. B. Isherwood, was burglarised and files and papers stolen. The private flat of Mrs. Bee Carthew (who was at the time a prominent Monday Club supporter and organiser of the Powelllight organisation) was broken into. The flat occupied by Mr. John Tyndall at the old Nationalist Centre at Tulse Hill was rifled of papers. The list of such incidents is almost endless. The Special Branch knows which group, led by which individuals, was responsible, but they were unable to persuade higher authorities to instigate a really thorough investigation.

Often information taken from material stolen in such raids would appear in anonymous smear articles, or in articles written by a known journalist on the basis of "research information" supplied. Sometimes even photostats of stolen items (such as NF membership file cards) would be reproduced in anonymously-produced smear publications such as The Monday Club — A Danger to British Democracy — which became notorious for prurient and defamatory intrusions into the private lives of a number of leading Right Wingers. That booklet, plus the anonymous articles used in a variety of Left Wing publications, bore the hallmark, in many people's view, of Gerry Gable's "research journalism". Peter Gladstone-Smith of The Sunday Telegraph reported that the booklet was the work of "Israeli intelligence men".

During the 1972/73 period Gable was devoting at least as much of his attention to the Monday Club as the National Front. Club members were quarrelling, and in the heated atmosphere the clever little games of an infiltrator and agent provocateur went un-noticed. That infiltrator was Leslie Wooler, and he was Gable's man. No effort was made to steal the Monday Club's membership list. Wooler was given the run of the Monday Club office whenever he liked, and he simply copied the lot! He also picked up a lot of the bitchy gossip about individual Club members which was later included in The Monday Club — A Danger to British Democracy.

I believe that some members of the Monday Club knew Wooler by his real name . . . but I have it from several ex-Club members that he also used the pseudonym "John Cooper". I have every reason for believing that the Monday Club "John Cooper" is the same "John Cooper" who told tall stories about 'dirty tricks' operations allegedly run by the Chilean Embassy to the recent T.V. London Programme — which story was "researched" by Gerry Gable!

At the time Wooler was associated with the Monday Club and making contact with the Chilean Embassy he was running a money-spinning political con-trick organisation called the Democratic Alliance. He published a tiny scrap of a bulletin called Liberty containing Gable-style smear attacks on the National Front. It was no doubt space in this magazine which he tried to sell to the Chileans when he first visited their embassy.

At this time Wooler was also paid a handsome retainer by the South Vietnamese Embassy in London to provide them with intelligence information obtained by a variety of methods, and to issue a regular bulletin promoting the South Vietnamese cause. He also provided a North Vietnamese journalist with intelligence services at the same time!

Prior to these activities, in about 1965/6, Wooler was a member of the Anti-Communist League. On one occasion the A.C.L. received a grant of £400 from the Nationalist Chinese Government for a delegate to visit Formosa for an anti-Communist conference. Wooler was delegated, but he used the money to take a holiday with his Chinese wife's in-laws in Malaya!

"VERY ROUGH CHARACTERS"

At the time of Wooler's involvement with the Monday Club in 1973 I tried to blow the whistle on his activities by giving details of the games he had been playing to Sunday Times journalist Tony Geraghty. Geraghty is a man of many contacts, and after checking my data he said: "The information you have supplied me about Wooler proved to be astonishingly accurate. It is clear that Wooler is mixed up with some very rough characters. We have already received a serious threat at our office." Geraghty did publish a story (together with a long out-of-date photograph) about Wooler's infiltration of the Monday Club but, on account of the threats received from Wooler's Zionist thug helpers, only slight mention of his connections with "anti-fascist" groups was made.

While Gable has obviously been doing well with his "research journalism", what with the infiltration of the pathetic Column 88 and his liaison with Wooler in the smear attack on the Chilean Embassy, it seems to me that he had his best operation going when he worked at 'feeding' Martin Walker of The Guardian throughout 1974 and 1975 with intelligence information about the NF, particularly when such information — true or false — could be used in such a way as to stoke up the 'Populist' — v — 'Hard-liner' confrontation within the NF which eventually led to the split in the party at the end of last year.

While Walker has gone on record with me as insisting that his real name is Walker, J. Kingsley Read told me (months before he left the NF) that he was assured by a reporter from The Sun who was at university with Walker that his real name was Beherens. If that report is true, it would explain the reason why Walker was picked by the Zionist intelligence network as their main national press outlet, and why Walker was not only keen to go NF bashing, but anxious

Asian Communists shout abuse at NF

IT started first in Bradford, when the National Front marched on St. Georges Day. We saw it again in Birmingham, when the NF mobilised in support of jailed Race Board victim Robert Relf. Black and Asian immigrants have aligned themselves with the gangsters of the extreme left in their anti-British assaults on the National Front. As the breakdown of Britain's multi-racial society accelerates, marauding gangs of immigrants are joining the communists and Trotskyites in their attack on the National Front, the police, on public property and on the very fabric of British society.

Spearhead and the National Front have always warned of this sinister alliance. We have pointed to the dictum of Karl Marx, according to which the British people would never make a revolution of their own — it would have to be imported. This is what we are seeing now. As patriotic British people increasingly give expression to their anger and frustration at the coloured invasion by marching with and voting for the National Front, the inevitable polarisation occurs; the ethnic battle lines are drawn and the immigrants ally themselves naturally with the most rabid anti-British elements, the Marxist left. They in turn are quick to exploit the resentment of the blacks and Asians, and are increasingly able to mobilise them on the streets in acts of revolutionary violence.

BLACK AND RED GANGSTERISM

These pictures show the scene at Winson Green, Birmingham, when 50 policemen were injured in running battles with Marxists and immigrant thugs while the National Front was holding a peaceful demonstration in support of Robert Relf. Supposedly organised by the "Birmingham Anti-Fascist Committee", the gangsters in fact comprised the International Socialists, the International Marxist Group, the Communist Party, the Indian Workers Association, the Pakistani Workers Association and the Bangladesh Workers Association. The latter three are all Marxist-oriented. They were joined by Black Power gangs of West Indian louts who attacked the police with stones and clubs. Precisely the same anti-British alliance was assembled in Bradford on St. George's Day under the banner of Mr. Reuben Goldberg's "Anti-Fascist Committee".

The message is quite clear. When the British people themselves protest, when they march on their own National Day, under their own flag and in their own country — this is the result. So the British people must either accept the take-over of their country, say nothing and be walked over by the immigrant hordes, or they must resist — and in the face of the violence carry the day. As we have shown in Bradford and Birmingham, there is only one force of national resistance that speaks for the British majority — the National Front.

TIME FOR NEW THINKING

PART 2

AT THE END of the first part of this article, published last month, I put the question: is Western policy, at the highest level, identical with Soviet policy? And if so, in what does this identity of purpose consist?

In answer to this question, particularly appropriate are the words of Dr. Bella Dodd, who for some time was a member of the National Committee of the Communist Party in the United States before finally becoming disillusioned with Communism. Speaking to W. Cleon Skousen, author of one of the most illuminating books on Communism, The Naked Capitalist, Dr. Dodd said: "I think the Communist conspiracy is merely a branch of a much bigger conspiracy."

As most of the readers of Spearhead will know, an abundant literature now exists which amply supports this point of view, and some of its leading exponents have been mentioned earlier in this article.

This "bigger conspiracy" is of course the conspiracy for world government. Once it is recognised that this conspiracy is the underlying motif in the promotion of Communism, and that therefore Communism as such is not necessarily seen by its promoters as an end in itself but merely as a means towards much more esoteric ends, it no longer appears fantastic that some of the most powerful agencies of Western Capitalism should be subsidising the build-up of Communist strength. Given that these capitalist agencies, and the politicians 'bought' by them, are dedicated to the world government idea, it is by no means illogical that they should be in cahoots with the rulers of the Kremlin. Both parties seek the same goal, though by different means.

Herein then lies the identity of purpose between East and West as we see them today. Both are dedicated to world government and therefore to internationalism; both are dedicated to the elimination of the free nation-state.

Accepting such an identity of purpose, a Soviet armed assault on the West is inconceivable, since this would be an assault on the very world which shares the ultimate goals of Communism and which provides Communism with its essential sustenance.

That the Soviets should have a genuine motive for attacking the West is only conceivable in the context of a revolution among the major Western nations whereby their peoples turned on and overthrew their internationalist masters and established genuine nationalist governments dedicated, as is the case with just a few Western nations like Spain, Chile and South Africa, to a real resistance to Communism. But in that case such an attack would not be possible because it would require armed forces and a war economy not dependent on Western technology and finance.

Once these facts are grasped, we may see what a nonsense are topical ideas on Western strategy and defence, for they are ideas that are based on a confrontation (between East and West) that does not in reality exist and on an armed threat (from the East) which could not exist but for Western help. Why then the frantic demand for the 'integration' of Western forces and the elimination of independent national defence systems?

Why indeed, except as part of the policy, pursued by Western and Soviet rulers in unison, of intensifying the drive towards world government and the destruction of national sovereignty? A nation certainly cannot be fully sovereign if it does not maintain armed forces adequate for the protection of its vital interests — under its own command and equipped by weapons produced in its own factories. If the current policy of 'integrating' the armed services of Western nations makes no sense in terms of resistance to any Soviet 'threat', it makes a great deal of sense in terms of the drive towards world government and the destruction of independent nationhood. To have 'supra-national' control of all the world's armies, navies and air forces is surely an indispensable thing to those aiming at world government, for ultimately it is in a nation's independently controlled armed forces that there resides the only means of resistance to such a world tyranny.

I mentioned earlier the possibility that the rules of the West may for their own reasons wish to sustain Soviet military power as a psychological weapon. What better purpose could such a weapon serve than to act as a stimulus to the increasing integration of the defences of Western nations — to the point where no such nations any longer had defences that they could call their own? Given that this is the purpose of those who control the West today, there is a perfect logic in their policy of encouraging the build-up of Soviet forces to terrifying proportions. Though such forces may never be intended for use in an all-out war against the West, they serve their purpose by creating a climate of world insecurity ideal for those who wish to herd us all into the world-government pen.

It is against this background of fact — of the real, as opposed to the illusory, conflict of interests in the world of today — that our magazine, and the National Front, which it supports, have always urged that Britain maintain armed forces, not only of the greatest possible strength, but independently commanded and equipped, so that they may be deployed at any time and in any place that national interests — which may not always be synonymous with the interests of other Western powers — require.

For the real conflict of interests is in fact not between 'East' and 'West', as commonly understood, but between the powers that work for world government and world monopoly and the spirit of free nationhood which instinctively resists that world government and monopoly.

None of this should be taken to mean that there is no threat to our security posed by the huge forces of the Soviet Bloc; there is indeed such a threat, and a very great one.

But we have to understand that it is a threat, not to any nebulous entity called the 'Western World', but solely to our national existence, to our national survival, to our national interests.

And we must also understand that it is a threat that exists only for as long as Soviet power is sustained by Western assistance, which means at the present time mainly assistance from the United States.

Therefore there is no possible contingency in which we could be at one and the same time threatened by Soviet power and reliant for our security on the United States. Either there is a Soviet threat which we must meet independently of the United States or there is no Soviet threat at all because the Soviet war machine is no longer supported by the United States.

In either event a policy for British security based on the American shield, and with British defence integrated within a system dominated and controlled by America, is totally unrealistic; it in no way corresponds with the real facts of power in the modern world.

At this point the question might be asked: even if there is no contingency in which we should rely on American help to meet an armed threat from the Soviet Union, is there no contingency in which to meet such a threat we would rely on the unity of Europe?

The answer to this is of course: yes, there is such a contingency. It would consist of an all-out Soviet onslaught on Western Europe in which America did not come to the latter's defence but continued in her technological and financial help to the Soviets. In such an event the Western European nations would certainly have common things to defend and every reason for co-ordinating their defences.

But let us consider more closely the likelihood of such an event. In the first place, is it seriously believed that American public opinion, having been conditioned to regard a Soviet threat to Western Europe as a threat to America itself, would permit any U.S. government to maintain a position of neutrality in such a situation, let alone to give actual assistance to the Soviets?

Secondly, what would the Soviets have to gain by having to occupy and police the whole of Western Europe as well as Eastern Europe? To do so would place an intolerable burden on their economy, even in the unlikely event of that economy continuing to be propped up by American aid, as it now is. There is a certain logic in the Soviets occupying the Eastern European countries in so far as, quite apart from any political considerations, they provide a convenient buffer zone which past Russian experience provides much argument for maintaining. No such logic exists for an attempted Soviet conquest of the whole of the remainder of Europe — particularly if it is borne in mind that, by the increasing internationalisation of the Western European countries, an end is being achieved which is identical to the ends pursued by Communism — and all without a shot having to be fired!

Far more likely and feasible contingencies exist for the deployment of British forces. They exist all round the world where Britain, even though she may not recognise it at the moment, has vital interests, and where those interests are liable to be threatened, as indeed they are now, not by a mass assault by the Red Army but by local forces receiving Communist backing. One such area is Southern Africa, where our true interest lies in supporting the White inhabitants against those who aspire to overthrow them. Another such area is in our own back yard, Northern Ireland. There are many more.

To deploy the necessary armed force in such areas we need services not integrated into any supra-national framework but instantly at the disposal of a British command. To ensure that there are no international pressures that may inhibit their use, we should also make certain that there is no vital equipment they require which cannot be provided by the industry and the technology of Britain itself.

Of course this does not rule out the possibility of conflicts in which, for the moment, we are placed in a position of alignment with other nations and therefore having everything to gain by co-ordinating our military effort with theirs — all the evidence of our history suggests that this is liable to happen.

But intelligent defence planning never proceeds on any such automatic assumption. It assumes only the existence of national forces to defend national interests, then when circumstances provide allies in the field this is regarded as a welcome bonus; it is never, ever, taken for granted.

It is one of the tragedies of our time that 'Conservative' opinion, which should be the mainstay of a robust attitude towards national self-defence, has been completely taken in by the theory of an East-West division of the world, of an automatic identity of interests between all those nations comprising the 'West', of the reliability of America as a bastion against Soviet aggression, and of Britain's security being consequently dependent on an integrated Western defence system dominated by America, i.e. NATO.

As it is, 'Conservative' thinking on matters of national security and defence is today no more reliable a guide to Britain's true needs in these things than the thinking that emanates from the political left. It is totally at variance with the true facts of the modern world, which make clear, as A. K. Chesterton pointed out, that the rulers of post-war America have done much more to undermine British power than Soviet power.

As a result, British national defencelessness is today as much a product of Conservative folly as of Labour folly.

The National Front, happily, has never so far fallen victim to these dangerous delusions which underlie 'orthodox' thinking on defence today. In its manifesto for the General Election of October 1974 it is stated: "... we oppose the total integration of our defences with those of other Western nations. We must be in a position to act on our own, should the need arise, and this means that we should be able to produce from our own factories all the necessary weapons of modern war, including our own independent nuclear arm. No British forces should in normal times of peace be under foreign command."

This policy is based, not on a sentimental yearning for a return to Victorian times and conditions, but on a realistic appraisal of the needs of survival in the 1970s.

Kissinger, Rockefeller and World Planning

KISSINGER-watchers might have been puzzled, momentarily, by the U.S. Secretary of State's recent comments on the rise of the Italian Communist party. Kissinger expressed concern at the prospect of communist participation in the Italian government and the consequent threat to NATO.

On the surface it was certainly puzzling, for as Kissinger-watchers will know, every action of the foreign-born Presidential advisor has been calculated to further the advance of international communism. Greece, Vietnam, the Middle East, Angola and Rhodesia — wherever the jet-propelled little doctor casts his baneful shadow, communism, or the enlargement of its influence is sure to follow. Whether it be in the cause of 'peace' or 'majority rule' or even of 'anti-communism', the net result is invariably the same.

Kissinger, too, has been the architect of detente, the scheme whereby American and Western European interests are gradually to be merged with those of the Communist Empire in the creation of a World Government. It also came to the attention of the House Committee on Internal Security that Kissinger had deliberately concealed from Congress certain aspects of his Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) which gave decisive advantages to the Soviet Union.

So what is one to make of Kissinger's warnings on the rise of Italian communism? His pro-communist record would seem to make it out of character, to say the least.

Kissinger's motives, in fact, are not that difficult to discern. He is an active agent in the promotion of World Government. To that end his role has been firstly to abet the growing power of the Soviet Union throughout the world in order to create an atmosphere of world insecurity, and secondly to advance such internationalist organs as the United Nations, the EEC and NATO as a means of achieving "collective security" in the face of the communist danger, thereby eroding national sovereignty. Finally, it is intended, detente diplomacy will gradually merge these international blocs into a single world system. If the West were not actively financing and sustaining the communist threat, this explanation of events might, it is true, seem difficult to credit; but the West is financing and sustaining the very thing which is supposed to be threatening it, and therefore no other explanation of internationalism and "collective security" can in any way be logical.

Consequently, it is no surprise that Kissinger views the rise of a Communist party in a NATO country with misgiving.

He is concerned to promote communism outside Europe, that is, Soviet communism and its worldwide expansion and to promote NATO-style collectivism as a response to it. Anything that might throw a spanner into the NATO works, therefore, is definitely to be frowned on, and that is what a communist government in a European country would inevitably do.

IDENTICAL WORLD STRATEGY

There can be little doubt that those who administer the Communist Empire share exactly the same view on the strategy for One World as the mysterious Western policy makers whose interests are represented by Henry Kissinger. Quite apart from extensive and conclusive documentation of the financial collusion between Soviet communism and the West, we have the testimony of Stalin himself, who outlined the same strategy for One World as that pursued by Kissinger and Co.

In his work Marxism and the National Question, Stalin emphasised that the necessary steps on the road to global conquest were to bring all nations together in a single world economic system, and above all to divide the world into regional groups as a transitional stage to World Government. People would more readily abandon their national loyalties to a regional loyalty at first rather than to a world authority. Later the regional authorities (such as the present NATO, SEATO, EEC etc.) would be brought all the way into a single world system. This was a blueprint first established by Lenin, which was subsequently refined by Stalin and others but has remained essentially the same for fifty years.

Since, therefore, the highest Western policy makers are operating precisely the same One World strategy as the Communists; since the West actively finances and sustains Communism, and since the founding of the United Nations, embryo World Government, was a joint enterprise involving 'American' financiers and highly placed Government officials together with known Communist agents such as Alger Hiss and Harry Dexter White, then that is just about the most conclusive evidence for a conspiracy as one is likely to get.

Kissinger made his role in all this quite plain when he addressed the United Nations General Assembly in 1973:

"These challenges cannot be solved by a world fragmented into self-contained nation-states, but only by co-operation in a world community . . . The vision of a world community is the necessity of our age . . . I pledge you that the United States is ready to begin the journey toward a world community. Our sights will be raised even when our tread must be measured."

Having to measure one's tread, I fancy, either means moving gradually for fear of alarming the masses of the people, or doing a thing while at the same time appearing not to be doing it. Probably both.

FOLLOWING A MASTER PLAN

Kissinger has been described as the man who started at the top and rose even higher. He reached the top straight from the staff of wealthy internationalist Nelson Rockefeller, who for ten years employed him as his chief foreign policy advisor. (That people like Rockefeller employ foreign policy advisors is a fairly good indication of who runs what in world politics today). In 1956 Kissinger was appointed director of a Special Studies Project for the Rockefeller Brothers Fund Inc., the purpose of the project being to "develop concepts that might be helpful in meeting the challenges America faces today."

The euphemism of 'challenges' is to be found frequently in the jargon of internationalist world planners. It would appear that by the time of his address to the U.N. in 1973, Kissinger had decided that "these challenges" (see above) could only be met by breaking down nation-states and forming a world community. It is certain that Kissinger has in fact followed a consistent programme ever since he was given the interesting job of developing concepts in order to meet challenges. Gad Yaacobi, an Israeli who studied under Kissinger at Harvard University's International Seminar, has revealed that in 1967 he made notes from Kissinger's lectures, one of which included a precise account of what subsequently happened in American relations with China, Vietnam, Russia and the Middle East. Kissinger has evidently followed something of a master plan.

There is no doubt that such master plans originate in the circles of Kissinger's former employers, the Rockefeller family. A very revealing article by ex-Rampart journalist Robert Scheer makes this quite plain:

"I'm a great believer in planning," Rockefeller told Scheer. "Economic, social, political, military, total world planning". Scheer was privileged enough to attend one of the regular meetings, at a remote mountain-top resort belonging to the Vanderbilts, of the Business Council, at which the Rockefellers bring together bankers, multi-national corporation heads and others for long-range planning discussions. Scheer observed such people present as Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board; Alan Greenspan, economic advisor to the President; Walter Wriston of First National City Bank; Dr. Frank Stanton, former President of CBS and the multi-national chiefs of General Motors and U.S. Steel.

Returning from this private gathering over crab cocktails and steaks, Scheer asked Rockefeller the difference between his role and that of his brother David Rockefeller. "Well, David is concerned with the world, he's the banker, so he has to take care of the global problems, and I started with the domestic — how to build domestic consensus for what has to be done".

This kind of statement illustrates exactly who is responsible for current developments in world planning. The Rockefellers have decided "what has to be done" and all that remains is to build a consensus for it. Presidents and Prime Ministers are merely bureaucrats dealing with trifling day-to-day executive problems while the unelected financial elite get down to planning such long-range policy matters as the direction of detente over the next forty years.

"CRITICAL CHOICES"

The Rockefellers' division of labour between global and domestic matters is conveniently reflected in the American government. Rockefeller employee Kissinger directs world events from the State Department and the National Security Council, while Rockefeller employee James Cannon directs domestic affairs as chairman of the U.S. Domestic Council.

Cannon entered the American administration directly from Nelson Rockefeller's Commission on Critical Choices, a long-range planning think-tank which includes Henry Kissinger, Herman Kahn, Henry Diamond, John Knowles, president of the Rockefeller Foundation, Daniel Moynihan, former U.S. ambassador to the U.N., William Paley of CBS, and George Schultz. A carefully orchestrated media campaign threw up a convenient smokescreen by portraying this Commission as just a platform for a Rockefeller presidential candidacy. It is, of course, nothing of the sort. It is just one of those multifarious panels, boards, councils and foundations where Rockefeller and a coterie of Zionists make American foreign policy without any authorisation from the electorate.

It is through such bodies as the Council on Foreign Relations and Rockefeller's Commission on Critical Choices that the Money Power has been feeding the basic data and the key personnel for Western foreign policy. A specific example was the occasion when Nancy Kissinger, on behalf of Rockefeller's Commission, sent James Theberge to Havana to explore ways of extending the detente with Russia to Cuba. These people are supposed to be private citizens. You and I don't send scholars to foreign countries to explore the possibilities of detente. But people like Rockefeller have been doing just that for over forty years. Meanwhile the average citizen goes on believing that America is run by mid-Western Congressmen, and Gerald Ford carries on playing at being President while Rockefeller and Kissinger feed him memos on the critical choices that have to be made.

HENRY KISSINGER
Planning for a World Community

Detente, then, is not a Nixon or a Ford policy, but part of the "total world planning" carried out by Rockefeller, Kissinger and the Wall St. elite. It is they, too, who take secret decisions such as funnelling big money to political parties in Italy so that the Italian communists don't get in the way of the planning by causing problems in NATO.

DETENTE MEANS MERGER WITH COMMUNISM

How is one to explain all this, if not in terms of conspiracy? We have seen the Rockefellers to be the architects of detente, which is explained as a device to counter the Russian threat. Yet the Rockefellers are strengthening the Russian threat by building the largest plant in the world for the manufacture of military vehicles in the Soviet Union. So the Rockefellers are planning detente to counter a threat which they are creating. You work it out!

There is evidence to indicate that detente, or the gradual amalgamation of Western political blocs with the Communist Empire, was formulated by the world planners at least twenty years ago. In 1953 the U.S. Senate set up the Reece Committee to Investigate Tax-Exempt Foundations, those institutions such as the Rockefeller, Ford and Guggenheim Foundations and the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, where the international bankers hoard their loot tax-free and use it to advance all manner of subversive One World causes. It was the Reece Committee which established that Foundation grants had been funnelled to the Institute of Pacific Relations, a communist infiltrated advisory body which was directly involved in the surrender of China to communism.

The significance of this is that Norman Dodd, during his period of service on the Reece Committee, was told the following by Rowan Gaither, then president of the Ford Foundation:

"Mr. Dodd, you know most of us here at the executive level have had experiences either with the European Economic Administration or the Office of Strategic Services, and operated under directives which emanated from the White House. We here now operate under similar directives which emanate from the White House. Would you like to know what the substance of these directives is?"

Dodd replied that he would be very glad to know, whereupon Gaither replied:

"The substance of the directives under which we operate our grant-making power is that we shall use this grant-making power to so alter life in the United States that we can be comfortably merged with the Soviet Union."

Gaither continued: "We have an Achilles heel. As we succeed we get closer and closer to the surface. This means our 'surfacing' is bound to be picked up by someone who will treat it like the end of a loose string by following it to where it leads. We think we will be able to spot such a person before he gets too far and that we have enough power to stop him going on".

Comment on this amazing admission would be superfluous, except to say that following the string to its ultimate origin would probably lead one to some unfamiliar though predictable sorts of faces. It is certainly true that Kissinger has 'surfaced' rather prominently, and that the direction of his world planning has become all too obvious. This probably explains the contrived campaign to prepare the way for his retirement, and his replacement by someone with a less tarnished and pro-Soviet record.

At present the likely candidate is the very American-sounding Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski of Columbia University, head of the Research Institute on International Change (what give-away names these One World organisations have!) and a good friend of Henry Kissinger.

Dr. Brzezinski, billed to take over Kissinger's position should the Democrats win the presidency from the Republicans under the banner of Jimmy Carter, is being promoted as an alternative. He is described as 'critical' of Kissinger, who, he says, is "somewhat dated" in his views. According to this Polish-born planner, Kissinger's Helsinki agreement in which the West capitulated to the demands of the Soviet Union did not go far enough.

Not surprisingly, the Institute of International Change is blessed by Rockefeller donations.

As the French say, the more things change, the more they stay the same.

Paying the Market price

DISCERNING nationalists should be well aware of the overwhelming importance that international finance has attached to the destruction of Britain's national sovereignty. Britain is to be rendered powerless by the use of the instrument of loan-capitalism, bribery, and sheer corruption.

The initiated will recall the occasion when the Right Honourable (sic) Edward Heath, a protege of the international banking fraternity, received his "prize" of £35,000 from the FVS Foundation of Hamburg for his part in bulldozing Britain into the Common Market. It will also be remembered that Roy Jenkins won monetary awards for his contribution, which entailed the simple task of abstaining when the voting took place. Perhaps that explains why Jenkins is now "bursting with enthusiasm" for the success of the EEC!

These are not the only "prize"-winners. According to a snippet in the Times of 15th May, 1975, Sir Christopher Soames, vice-president of the EEC, received £6,000 from the aforementioned FVS Foundation "for his services to European unity". The FVS Foundation, we are told, was set up in 1931 to promote "European cultural, scientific and humanitarian activities". Sounds like a European branch of the atheistic UNESCO!

Last June saw the Common Market Referendum farce when, according to the Government White Paper (Cmnd.6105), 17,378,581 people voted "Yes" and 8,470,073 voted "No". British nationalism was denied a platform to expound its views throughout the campaign. The self-appointed National Referendum Campaign, which claimed to represent all the anti-Market organisations, refused affiliation to the National Front — Britain's fourth largest political party! However, rejection of all nationalist parties was inevitable since the National Referendum Campaign had declared itself in favour of UNO, GATT, NATO and the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). In a nutshell, the National Referendum Campaign was comprised entirely of a bunch of internationalists.

STATEMENT OF ACCOUNTS

The one interesting outcome of the Referendum was the accounts of the two campaigning organisations which were published in October as a Government White Paper (Cmnd.6251). As one would expect, there was a huge discrepancy between the monies received and spent by Britain in Europe (pro-Market) and the National Referendum Campaign. Britain In Europe spent a total of £1,481,583 compared with only £133,630 by the NRC (£125,000 of which was a Government grant).

The most fascinating part of the accounts is the list of companies and individuals that donated £100 or more to the Britain in Europe camp — no less than 297. Incidentally, only seven donations of £100 or more were received by the NRC.

Nine companies contributed £20,000; IBM donated £20,000; Vickers Ltd donated £25,000. From Antony Sutton's revealing book National Suicide we learn that these three companies have each helped to build up the military strength of the Soviet Union. The Ford Motor Company built the Gorki automobile plant in Russia which now produces trucks and military vehicles. Modern military technology depends upon the use of computers and these have been duly sold to the Soviets by IBM, while submarines have been supplied by Vickers Armstrong (now Vickers Ltd).

Another of the generous nine donors is Shell Oil (Royal Dutch Petroleum), which gave £25,000. The Shell Oil company recently admitted that they had paid bribes to government officials in six countries. It may or may not be of significance that H.R.H. Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands, founder of the sinister One World Bilderberg movement, is an important figure in this country.

£25,000 was the figure contributed by Marks and Spencer Ltd. It will be remembered that Israel Moses Sieff, former Chairman of Marks and Spencer and vice-president of the 'British' Zionist Federation, was the moving spirit behind the body founded in the 1930s known as Political and Economic Planning (PEP). The rationalisation programme of PEP was a sheer drive for political and economic monopoly that entailed the elimination of private property and enterprise. The monopolistic drive by Marks and Spencer continues to this very day under the company's present Chairman, Sir Marcus Sieff, the new vice-president of PEP.

Other companies that have assisted in the build up of the Soviet Union's military strength and also contributed to the Common Market "in" campaign are: Rolls Royce (£15,000) and Standard Cables and Telephones (£10,000).

ROLE OF THE FINANCIERS

One cannot study closely the accounts of the Britain In Europe campaign without failing to notice the preponderance of contributions from merchant bankers and financiers. These include: N.M. Rothschild & Sons (£5,000), Kleinworth Benson (£10,000), Arbuthnot Latham (£1,000), Baring Brothers (£10,000), Brown Shipley

(£1,000), Hill Samuel (£10,000), Hambros Bank (£5,000), Samuel Montagu (£5,000), Lazard Brothers (£10,000), Yorkshire Bank (£1,000), Hong Kong & Shanghai Banking Corporation! (£7,500), and the London Warburgs, S. G. Warburg & Co. (£10,000).

Much of the responsibility for the moulding of the world to its present shape must be laid at the door of international financiers. Among these, the Warburgs, who gave generously to the Market "in" campaign, have been particularly prominent; they helped finance the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia and form the Federal Reserve Board in the United States. A current director of S. G. Warburg is Sir Eric Roll, who is also a director of the Bank of England, president of PEP, and a Bilderberg regular. (Kleinworth Benson's Chairman has also attended Bilderberg meetings). It was James Paul Warburg of this powerful banking family who had the audacity and arrogance to proclaim before the U.S. Senate (17th February, 1950):

"We shall have World Government whether or not we like it. The only question is whether World Government will be achieved by conquest or consent".

Surely that is the aim of international finance: the creation of a One World State ruled by a tyrannical World Government. What are NATO, SEATO, UNO, the soviet empires, and, above all, the Common Market, if they are not stages or alternative lines of approach to One World — a world dominated by the princes of finance?

The idea of unity in Europe is an avowedly Communist concept; it was Lenin who urged the creation of a "United States of Europe". But he was not the first to do so.

Serious students of the Communist conspiracy recognize that the techniques of the Order of the Illuminati, founded in Bavaria by Adam Weishaupt exactly two hundred years ago, are the models for Communist methodology. One of Weishaupt's adepts, the Prussian Baron Jean Baptiste Cloutz, who had elected to be known as Anacharsis, was the first to proclaim the formula of the "United States of Europe" in 1793.

If the international finance — communist conspiracy for the global enslavement of mankind ever realizes its goal — and it is by no means certain that One World will be resisted — then it will be partly due to the price paid for continued Market membership by the above-named dubious patrons. The dream of Anacharsis Cloutz, set forth in his Republique Universelle, will have come true: "When the Tower of London falls like the Tower of Paris it will be all over with tyrants. All the people forming only one nation, all the trades forming only one trade, all interests forming only one interest... The universe will form one State, the State of united individuals... the Universal Republic."

HOAX OR HOLOCAUST?

THE HOAX OF THE TWENTIETH CENTURY by Prof. A. R. Butz
(Historical Review Press, 315 pages, paperback edition £2.30)

SPEARHEAD regularly receives recently published books for review, many of them interesting and absorbing works. It is rare, however, to receive a book that can genuinely be described as a fascinating and important work of scholarship, but that is what Prof. Arthur Butz of Northwestern University, Illinois has produced in The Hoax of the Twentieth Century.

His subject is one that has stimulated a great deal of recent controversy — namely the allegation that, during the Second World War, millions of Jews were murdered in “gas chambers” by the Nazis in accordance with an official programme of mass extermination. A number of historians, including Prof. Taylor in this country, have since disposed of many of the lingering myths associated with World War II, but the genocide charge has remained untouched by competent historians, doubtless from a desire to avoid bitter controversy or worse. They have thus left the field clear for Jewish non-historians such as Gerald Reitlinger and Raul Hilberg, whose works cannot avoid bias, to say the very least.

This gap in historical revisionism has now been filled by Prof. Butz's book, which in the depth of its research and the breadth of its scope will remain the most complete statement of its kind ever written. We believe this subject demands the same objective investigation as any other historical problem, and that is what Prof. Butz has provided in his brilliant study. The alternative is censorship.

The Hoax of the Twentieth Century breaks completely new ground principally in Chapter III, ‘Washington and New York’, where Prof. Butz reconstructs the actual evolution of the gas chamber stories in the United States during the war; and in Chapter IV on the Auschwitz camp, which is the basis of the extermination charge. In Chapter III, the author shows how the allegations were manufactured from the persistent propaganda of the World Jewish Congress and its agencies, which from 1942 were bombarding a reluctant U.S. State Department with stories of human soap and glue factories, electrocution in baths, mass suffocation by steam, poisoning in hermetically sealed cars etc. Most of these stories were dismissed at the time, and after the war they were quietly forgotten. What remained were the Auschwitz gas chamber charges. Yet these appeared in the propaganda last of all, and were accepted as true by Washington only in 1944 after concerted pressure from the World Jewish Congress. Thus it came about that, in 1945, the Allies were already committed to a belief in something for which no one at the time had the slightest proof.

Prof. Butz shows that the ‘evidence’ for the charges still depends on that presented at Nuremberg in 1945. In other words, without the documents and testimony of Nuremberg, there would simply be no proof at all that the events charged had ever taken place. Hence the importance of the author's incomparably skilful analysis of the Nuremberg documents. He shows, for example, that no German documents from Auschwitz mention a “gas chamber” (Gaskammer). Only one document from a construction firm refers to a Vergasungskeller, which the author, with his specialist knowledge in engineering, proves to mean a “gas generation cellar” for igniting the crematoria used for the disposal of those persons who died in the camp. But the explanation of the Jewish ‘historians’ is interesting. Reitlinger claims that the Vergasungskeller is really a “gas chamber” when it is obviously not, while Hilberg ignores the problem altogether and claims that entirely different buildings (mortuaries and shower baths) were really gas chambers. No evidence is offered for this claim. The irrelevant Vergasungskeller is as near as anyone has ever got to providing documentary evidence of “gas chambers” at Auschwitz.

Prof. Butz presents a convincing case that the remaining evidence, ‘confessions’ from Nazis themselves, were perjured statements extracted under duress. The Auschwitz commandant, for example, ‘confessed’ to receiving an extermination order from Himmler (verbally, of course, there are no documents) in the summer of 1941. Reitlinger claims he really meant the summer of 1942, because that was when organised exterminations were supposedly started. However, documents show that crematoria facilities at Auschwitz, which were supposedly built for the extermination programme (ordered in the summer of 1942, we have agreed to pretend), were being built at the beginning of 1942. These are exactly the sort of contradictions one would expect to emerge from a tissue of lies.

The author's conclusion is that the post-war world has been the victim of a propaganda hoax — and he demonstrates that all hoaxes are characterised by facts that are open to a dual interpretation. For example, we are asked to believe that Zyklon B poison was used as an insecticide in the camps — but also, allegedly, for exterminations. Conventional crematoria existed to dispose of those who died from natural causes — and also for exterminations. Disrobing-showering procedures were followed for disinfection purposes — and also for exterminations. Some mortuaries and shower baths were genuine mortuaries and shower baths, while others were really “gas chambers”. The stench that pervaded the Auschwitz region was not only due to the oil, rubber and other chemical industries carried on there, but also to exterminations.

Can anybody believe such a story?

SIR: With the continuing massive influx of coloured immigrants into Britain and their increasing high birth rate coupled with that of those already here, the white population with its declining birth rate and excessive emigration will eventually become a minority within their own homeland. This can quite simply be demonstrated mathematically if the present trends continue. I wonder whether the blacks, with their power through participation in government, will be so lenient and merciful to this minority as the whites are to them today?

Unless these aliens are removed from this island of ours, the British people as they have been known through the centuries will simply cease to exist. By sheer weight of numbers the aliens will occupy all the major industrial and urban areas of Britain, forming on the map an enormous inverted letter 'S' — from Lancashire down through the north and south Midlands, turning eastwards and engulfing London and the south east. The British people in future years will be pushed into the rural east coast areas from Northumberland to Norfolk, and in the west into Cumberland and Westmoreland, and the West Country. Going by a much less sinister historical precedent, the whites will probably end up paying danegeld to the blacks to preserve their territorial boundaries! The Welsh and Scots would have long since closed their borders to the danger. Fantasy? It's happening right now. How to prevent it — vote NF, sell NF. It's the only alternative to national suicide.

G. A. WILSON,
Blidworth, Notts.

SIR: The recent municipal elections in the city of Leicester, in which the National Front polled a truly magnificent 43,000 votes, were accompanied by the most hysterical anti-NF smear campaign mounted by Zionist organisations. Addressing its selected readership, the Jewish Chronicle was good enough to inform us that the Board of Deputies of British Jews caused no less than 100,000 anti-National Front smear leaflets to be printed for use against NF candidates in the May elections. A considerable number of these leaflets, purporting to identify the NF with Nazism, found their way to Leicester.

On the basis of the voting, therefore, we must either assume a) that there are over 18,000 Nazis resident in Leicester (a circumstance which must surely seem improbable to all but Mr. Paul Rose, MP), or b) that the citizens of Leicester are not so stupid and easily stampeded as a minority of hysterical Jews believe them to be. Knowing the temperament of my fellow Britons a little better than the Board of Deputies, I think the latter is more likely.

P. MERILL,
Maidenhead, Berks.

SIR: Britain has played a particularly dirty game with Rhodesia. In 1922 Rhodesians were offered by the Minister for the Colonies, Mr. Winston Churchill, under the Premiership of Mr. Lloyd George, the choice between self-government under the Crown or union with South Africa. The condition of any future Majority Rule was not made — otherwise the second option would have been taken. Therefore, to my mind, it was illegal for Britain to make this contentious condition in 1964 because it was then, obviously, not a fair choice in 1922. A similar insertion after a distinct choice in any business contract would be thrown out of court.

It was this illegality by Britain which caused U.D.I. because responsible men in Rhodesia, including the Tribal Chiefs, were aware that the majority of Africans were not sufficiently mature to make majority rule work with any degree of reason. This has been proved in the other African Colonies — not one of them now has a system of true majority rule. They had one man — one vote once, and thereafter rule by one man or one party. And along the way some 4½ million Africans were killed. Yet this principle of Majority Rule in Africa is still claimed to be sacrosanct!

It is for this patently false principle that Britons were trying to starve Rhodesians to death through sanctions and are encouraging vicious terrorists, armed by Russia and trained by Cubans, to operate inside Rhodesia. The British Government has now offered a large subsidy to Mozambique which is the base for terrorist raids.

When I read of the I.R.A. bomb outrages in London, after the initial feeling of revulsion, I realise that the British people are being repaid in their own coin for what they are encouraging in Rhodesia.

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Spearhead publishes the best letter to the press on National Front policy every month. Send your cutting to us not later than the 15th of the previous month. You could win a £1 Nationalist Books voucher. This month's winner (below) was published in the Bristol Evening Post.

IT NEVER ceases to amaze me how Britain's left-wing craves its right to go around spending other people's money as though the stuff was about to curl into dried leaves. Bursting with indignation, they feel justly outraged over the Chancellor's recent proposals to cut public spending by £3,000 million; and like spoilt children fearful of having their supply of sweets cut-off, they are campaigning feverishly to try and get the cuts halted.

Happily, however, their plans have been thwarted so far, mainly due to a lack of support from some of their more wily colleagues at Westminster and most of the trade union leaders, who appear to have suddenly woken up to the seriousness of Britain's economic plight.

Not that the proposed cuts gives Britain's taxpayer's much to smile about. For there is little joy in Mr Healey's White Paper to ease the burden of paying off the massive debts which successive governments have amassed over the years which present and future generations will spend sweating and toiling to pay the interest on. Figures in the White Paper show that interest on Government debts will have soared to £7,500,000,000 a year by 1978. This is £3,300,000,000 more than the Government expected a year ago, and means that it will be paying interest equivalent to about £140 per head of the population each year. In fact, such is the state of Britain's economy, that the Government faces the daunting prospect of having to seek further massive loans in order to simply service the debts alone! What a fearsome prospect for Britain's working masses. What a dismal outlook for anyone concerned about their children's future.

And yet this is the reality which the left in Britain chooses to brush aside. The interests of working people will never be truly served while the real parasites riding the backs of workers are allowed to flourish — international finance. However, this is an area of reality affecting working people which the left can always be relied upon to leave unmolested.

TERRY SAVAGE

CHRISTIAN LOVE

AT THE fifth Assembly of the World Council of Churches, held at Nairobi during November-December, 1975, Allan Shaw, a member of the British delegation, wrote in the Assembly's daily newspaper Target pointing out that the Methodist Church in Britain has supported the programme of violence from the outset.

He states that: "Armed struggle has become a necessary part of the total strategy to achieve justice". His letter ends with the words: "The Methodist Church recognizes that those who are fighting for liberation do so in love and not in hate".

Perhaps Mr. Shaw and his fellow 'Christians' should take note of the type of love that emanates from their 'Liberation Lovers', the Marxist controlled Mozambique Mau-Mau.

Late on the night of 5th December, 1975, (only a few days after Shaw's statement equating terror with love), a gang of these 'liberators' entered a village in the Mount Darwin area of Rhodesia, armed with knives and Russian automatic weapons. Seizing hold a Mr. Chikombe Mazvidza, a

Chikombe Mazvidza in hospital

Christian and nephew of the village headman, they demanded food. On being refused they tied him up, and beat him mercilessly, fracturing his wrists. They cut off his ears, his lips and all the flesh from his nose to his chin. Then at gun point they forced his wife to roast the flesh on an open fire and eat it. His wife stated: "So I ate and vomited and ate and vomited and they said to keep on eating until it was all finished."

Also injured in the raid was Mr. Mazvidza's mother, who had her legs held apart and a red-hot log applied to her thighs and private parts. Finally the village headman and his brother were beaten-up; both were hospitalised with fractures and multiple bruises after the beating by these liberators of love. Mr. Mazvidza said from his sickbed: "These people who did this are not human beings".

Despite the barbarity of this assault, not one leading churchman raised his voice in protest, though the victim was a fellow Christian. It only leaves one wondering where in the Bible this bloodthirsty episode is justified, or has the World Council of Churches merely give African communists dispensation to engage in beatings, sexual sadism, murder and cannibalism.

ZIONISTS RUN BIGGEST 'DIRTY TRICKS' OPERATION IN BRITAIN

to give positive promotion to any pro-Zionist story.

I know that Gable was 'feeding' Walker because I was informed of the fact by a totally reliable and political impartial source, and because Walker used in his 'Open File' column NF membership file card material which had been stolen from NF Head Office.

Walker gave a rather indiscreet speech to the Politics Society at Edinburgh University on 10th December, 1974. Here are some of the significant statements which Walker made:

"I've heard it said that money is reaching the NF from a Nazi 'Odessa' source in Germany via a Dr. . . . in South London. I've done a service job on Dr. . . . 's house and I've found no evidence to substantiate this . . . I've got a photostat of the NF's internal accounts . . . The Pawsons Road Head Office of the NF is owned by Mr. Gordon Brown. Mr. Brown is a strange person. He goes around all the time taping every conversation. Still, I reckon Mr. Brown's bugs aren't as good as mine!"

Now I take the expression "a service job" to mean an uninvited entry and illicit search of a private individual's home. This is dangerous work for a career journalist on a reputable paper like The Guardian to undertake. That kind of work is undertaken by people who call themselves "research journalists". I took the trouble of writing to the then Editor of The Guardian, Alastair Hetherington, asking him what a Guardian journalist might mean by a "service job" on a private individual's home. Hetherington replied by asking me precisely what I was getting at, and so I sent him full details of Walker's speech at Edinburgh, and repeated my question. I received no further communication from Hetherington on the subject.

Walker does not seem to handle so many of The Guardian's anti-NF stories these days. If the Zionist intelligence and propaganda network is securing outlets for its propaganda smears on TV news magazine programmes and by regular spots on prestige radio newscasts like The World This Weekend (producer, Jenny Abramski) and if a 'dirty tricks' operative like Gable, posing as a "research journalist" is prepared (sometimes) to allow his name to be given out (as it was on London Weekend Television's London Programme), then who needs Walker and the small circulation Guardian?

It would be nice, when writing an article such as this, to be able to construct a neat, concise pattern or sequence . . . a defined beginning, a middle and a neatly tied-up end. But propaganda work and 'dirty tricks' operations against the NF in particular and the Right in general are an ongoing feature of life which is hard to keep up with. Quite frankly, it has taken a fairly dumb Goy (which is what I am) quite some time of seeing and experiencing these and numerous other events to realise what has been going on . . . what kind of an intelligence, propaganda and subversion operation the Zionist intelligence network has been mounting. They are obviously extremely sharp, cunning, and ruthless people . . . who can be very subtle when they want to be. They must never be underestimated.

But shapeless though this article doubtless is, I believe I have brought together enough facts and enough reasonable conclusions based on facts to indicate that the Zionist movement operates a high-power intelligence and 'dirty tricks' operation in Britain which is calculated to disrupt, by fair means or foul, the activities of lawful political organisations which pursue objectives contrary to Zionist objectives.

I believe that I have also established that the civil liberties and security of private individuals whose activities or opinions conflict with the desires of the Zionists have been trampled under foot continually over a period of years.

The Roses, the Gables, the Walkers, the Woolers and the Ludmers are leading AGENTS for the Zionist conspiracy — but they are by no means the BOSSES of the set-up. THEY keep well in the background, as they are Top People in politics, big business and the media. It will be hard work accumulating evidence against them, but it must be done. Sooner or later they will make a big mistake, and their whole operation will be unravelled.

N.F. MARCHES FOR ROBERT RELF

2,000 PARADE TO STAFFORD PRISON

The National Front mounted its biggest demonstration yet in support of Robert Relf, the courageous prisoner of the Race Board, on Saturday, 29th May in Stafford. 2000 NF members (the number was estimated as even higher by some newspapers) formed a column that stretched through the town as they made their way with flags flying to Stafford Prison, where Robert Relf is imprisoned.

Apart from isolated outbreaks of left-wing abuse en route, the march was unaccompanied by the usual howling mob of unwashed degenerates that is a regular by-product of any patriotic manifestation. It was a march of impressive dignity, the silence broken by repeated chants of "Free Robert Relf!"

The rally outside the prison walls was addressed by Mrs Sadie Relf, Martin Webster, National Activities Organiser; Councillor Tonge, the Mayor of Stafford; Gerry Oldland, NF West Midlands Organiser who has regularly visited Robert Relf in prison; and George Wright, NF Parliamentary candidate in the Rotherham by-election. Mrs Relf, who was raised on the shoulders of NF members to the cheers of the crowd, told the meeting how her husband was not only being treated by a Nigerian doctor but also a foreign "psychiatrist" who told him that he was entirely alone and had no support outside.

Councillor Tonge, who had earlier warned townspeople of impending trouble from the NF marchers, withdrew his remarks and thanked the National Front for a peaceful and orderly demonstration. Accepting a membership application card from Martin Webster, the mayor told him: "I am a true Britisher too". This patriotic declaration not surprisingly landed him in deep water with race-mixing Tories on the local council.

The National Front will be redoubling its efforts in the coming weeks to campaign for the release of Robert Relf, who, as this issue goes to press, was again committed to prison at his second court appearance. The NF has already put to print a further 300,000 "Free Robert Relf" stickers, and leaflets on this theme are also in preparation. The case of Robert Relf will also be made a feature of the NF's by-election campaign in Rotherham, the major theme of which will be "Stop Immigration-Start Repatriation!"

Branches—this is what you can do!

THE FACE on the posters that flap on the walls along Leicester's Belgrave Road is Adolf Hitler's. The slogan underneath reads: "Your National Front candidate." Mr Graham Eustace, secretary of the Front's Leicester branch, is not at all put out. He says: "Racial feeling here is so high that if Hitler was a candidate people would vote for him."

In Leicester, one person in five is a coloured immigrant. In the local government elections earlier this month one-fifth of the votes went to the National Front. Of course, the figures are coincidental, but the connection between them is not.

Leicester is a city under strain, some say near breaking point. Here, for the first time in its unsavoury history, the National Front, a fundamentally fascist, openly racist organisation, has become a respectable political force.

Neither the Labour Party in the city nor the ruling Conservatives have any idea what to do about it. They hope the problem will go away; they say it's better not to talk about it. Who can wonder if out of the deafening silence the Front's voice rises so clearly? The fact is that on May 6 around 15,000 people voted for the Front, voted for a programme that boils down to four words: Stop immigration, start repatriation.

Put as gently as possible, that means a lot of people in Leicester feel their community's capacity for absorbing coloured immigrants has been reached if not passed. And the signs are that as long as everyone goes on ignoring that unpalatable view, support for the National Front will grow.

To Mr Barrie Brazier, the city's senior community relations officer, anti-immigrant feeling is largely a matter of "visual impact." He says: "If you drive down Belgrave Road or walk round the city centre on Saturday you would think 50 per cent of the city was coloured. But of course it isn't. People think what they see is a fact." It's hardly surprising, particularly when no one knows what the facts are. Leicester's total population is 280,000. Estimates of immigrant numbers vary from 40,000 to 70,000.

To Mr Krishna Shah, a shopkeeper who came to Leicester from Kenya 17 years ago and is the only coloured member of the city council, his community's impact is a matter of pride. "We have over 150 shops in Leicester run by the Asian community," he says. "We have 25 or 30 knitwear factories, half a dozen small engineering firms, two Hindu temples, five cinemas . . . that's why our people like to come here. We have created our own atmosphere."

Emotional

Mr Brazier says firmly: "This is a multi-coloured, multi-racial, multi-cultural community and it will become even more so in the future. Nothing is going to stop the proportion of coloured people in Leicester growing . . . I look forward to a true multi-racialism. I can't understand people's fears of the city becoming coloured. It's an emotional, irrational response based on ignorance and misinformation.

"The high unemployment is a factor of course. It makes people feel insecure. But there are jobs available if people are willing to turn their hands to them. There's a housing shortage, it's true: 14,000 on the council waiting list. But there are plenty of houses in the private sector. You have only to look in estate agents' windows to see that. There's also said to be a shortage of places in some city schools, but there are plenty in the county and the children could be bussed to them.

"You can't just blandly say this city can't accommodate any more immigrants. I know some people feel there's a saturation point, but I don't accept that." Curiously, however, Mr Brazier does accept that there is a "proportion above which the strains begin to show."

The trouble with Mr Brazier's uncompromising approach is that it offers nothing to people who find it hard to "look forward to true multi-racialism," who find that the sights, sounds and smells of the streets in quite large areas of their city make them feel like interlopers, as insecure as tourists in a foreign land without any of the compensations.

To them the National Front's appeal is direct and, in Leicester at any rate, outwardly clean. The man who takes the credit for that is the chairman, Mr Anthony Reed-Herbert, a 28-year-old solicitor, smooth, clever, sophisticated, a former leader of the local Young Conservatives, who is careful to distance himself from the lurid men in London, the Front's national leaders. Mr John Tyndall and Mr Martin Webster.

Mr Reed-Herbert argues that giving a man a piece of cardboard saying he's a British citizen no more makes him British than wrapping a towel round his own head would make him an Indian. He says that immigrants in large numbers "represent a threat to the identity, integrity, the very existence of the British race and nation . . . We went to war in 1939 to stop us being invaded by the Germans. Now we're being invaded by the coloureds."

Not, he hastens to add, that there is any question of violence. "We're a legal, democratic, serious political party out to win political power through the ballot box. Violence could only be counter-productive to our cause." Mr Eustace's line is less seductive, more simple: "People are basically racist," he says. "It's a natural instinct. That's why they vote for us."

The Labour Party lost control of the council on May 6 after being in power five years. Its leader, the Reverend Ken Middleton, vicar of St. Matthew's confesses to being surprised by the extent to which the National Front took away their votes. It has never happened before. But he is not planning to do anything about it. He hopes it's a "passing phase, a moment of aberration."

"Some members of the Labour Party think the National Front should be answered loud and clear. But I don't think that cuts much ice with the voters: They're not really interested in politics. It was a protest vote, a shot across the bows of the major parties. No, of course you can't ignore a protest vote. But it's much more difficult to decide what to do about it."

I got a similar impression of reluctance to face up to the issue from Mr Michael Cufflin, the stockbroker who leads the Tories on Leicester City Council. However, he did concede that the "pressure is becoming too great" and was causing "very widespread concern." He advises people to talk to their MP about their worries and hints hopefully at a "redefinition of citizenship so that we can control the situation." He added, somewhat superfluously: "Middleton and I have agreed to play it very low key."

Whatever else it is, low key is something that the Leicester Mercury, the city's only — and obviously affluent — newspaper is not. Indeed, its conduct in the front line of a tense and delicate racial situation is a controversial and hotly debated topic.

Mr Brazier says his community relations council is "deeply concerned" about the Mercury. He says he personally never talks to its reporters on the telephone without recording the conversation. Mr Krishna Shah claims to be speaking for the immigrant community when he says that the Mercury is "very biased." He accuses it of exaggeration and rumour-mongering.

Angry

Such accusations make the paper's editor, Mr Neville Stack, very angry indeed. "Our job is to publish not censor the news," he says. "We bring out the facts. By doing that we do more for race relations than anyone else in this community. We stand for integration and not discrimination. We've denounced the National Front. We say the Asian community is here to stay and we must accept them. We are, however, against further immigration because another influx would mean the jam would have to be spread thinner. Believe me, we could start a race riot tomorrow if we wanted to. We've got power and we know it. But we don't believe in suppressing facts. We do an honest job."

To illustrate their case, the Mercury's critics point in particular to two stories published in the weeks running up to the local elections. On April 12 the paper's front page lead was headlined: "Immigrants in Mafia rackets, unions told." The story quoted an unnamed union official as saying that money was being extorted from coloured workers in the city by other coloured men. An editorial inside the same issue of the paper said: "The charges cannot be substantiated by hard evidence."

If nothing else, this troubled city makes one thing clear. It is that any debate on race relations and immigration in Britain today that fails to take Leicester's experience into account makes no sense at all.

The mockery of power politics

Reprinted with acknowledgements to the Eureka Students League, University of Melbourne, Australia.

TO the present generation the First and Second World Wars, with their enormous suffering and distress, must seem to have been hardly worth the expenditure of human lives and resources. For despite the fact that the forces of freedom and righteousness are said to have triumphed, the aftermath has not been a pleasant one even for the victors. The present state of the world is not one with which a great many could claim to be content, considering that the universal hope and promise had been that peace would bring a better life for all.

Therefore, the underlying causes of the continual failure of governments to secure the fundamentals of a worth-while existence for their people must be established.

For decades the public has been taught that the contemporary world is divided into two ideological power blocs, the Capitalist West and the Communist East, with their respective military capabilities so evenly balanced that neither desires to confront the other in a direct clash, yet always seeking to influence non-aligned nations of the so-called "Third World" into adopting their particular socio-economic system.

The facts concealed in the history of the Twentieth Century make a mockery of this characterization of power politics.

Soviet Russia had from its inception the full sponsorship of various financiers in the West who alone had the power necessary to make the Bolshevik Revolution a reality. In addition, indisputable evidence is available which shows that since 1917, 90% of Soviet technology has been directly imported from the West.

The degree and kind of aid extended to the Soviets was for years a well guarded secret, although today their sponsors in the West are so confident of their monopoly in the shaping of public opinion through the media that such aid is openly reported. In recent years, huge grain and other foodstuff deals have been transacted between Western nations advanced enough to produce food surpluses, and Communist nations whose productive inefficiency is legendary. Millions of tons of Australian, Canadian and United States grain have been exported to China and the Soviet Union at bargain prices by Michel Fribourg, head of the Continental Grain Company. As a direct consequence the cost of grain derived products multiplies in the producing countries.

The U.S.S.R. is represented as a nation which has fought the active opposition of "Capitalist" interests in a quest for a more equitable social system, but a society built upon such basic contradictions as the Communist Empire could never advance without massive outside aid.

It is impossible for anybody of normal sensibilities to study the appalling crimes carried out by Soviet Russia for example, not only against other nations but also against its own people, without feeling a sense of outrage and disgust for this madness which holds every civilized value in contempt and ridicule.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn's three volume study of the Soviet prison system is only the latest of the many documented reports to indict Communism from its shady origins to the present moment. The growth of Communism has been carefully assisted by an overseas cabal of financiers upon which the political survival of many so-called statesmen came to depend. After the Second World War it served the purpose of these conspirators to create a phony "cold war" between East and West, in order that the previously sovereign nations of the West should be panicked into forming multi-national conglomerations in the interests of "collective security" to meet a threat which they had helped to create themselves — and which they saved from destruction at the hands of a revitalized and enraged Germany. Thus came into being N.A.T.O. and the European Common Market, preceded by the most important institution for paralyzing the will of the West and preventing its nations from acting independently — the United Nations Organization.

This could not have occurred unless the Parliaments and Assemblies of the Western governments were filled with an amalgam of liars, cheats and timeservers, diverting the public gaze as their cosmopolitan sponsors strengthened their hold. But let nobody suppose that mere fools are awarded enormous salaries in direct proportion to their success in damaging the country through misrule. Government posts are often occupied by highly intelligent people — yet intelligence alone has never been a guarantee of good government, nor is it incompatible with cowardly and ignoble traits of character. These minions are carefully selected for their ability to remain mute as the best interests of the nation are cynically trampled behind the play acting which passes for political leadership.

It is understandable that our lawgivers have never advocated for themselves a policy of reward in proportion to success in furthering national interests, otherwise each would long ago have been reduced to poverty. Bad government can never be attributed to mere incompetence, since on average, at least some decisions might be expected to serve national rather than international interests. The fact that none do and we, together with the rest of the Western world, lumber towards an abyss shows that the decisions made in high places are not the result of stupidity but of calculated policy.
